THE DIVERSE FRONTIERS IN GLOBALIZATION

THE GEORGE S. DIVELY VISITING PROFESSORSHIP AT LYNN UNIVERSITY

With a generous grant from the George S. Dively Foundation, Lynn University established an arena to showcase its commitment to international education and global perspectives. This resource, the George S. Dively Visiting Professorship, enables Lynn University to bring to its campus dynamic individuals whose achievements have contributed to world progress. The intent of this program is to strengthen and enrich Lynn University's academic life through opportunities for dialogue and interaction between students, faculty and outstanding individuals who have demonstrated exceptional leadership in the international market. The George S. Dively Visiting Professorship also provides a valuable and stimulating experience for the South Florida community.

The Visiting Professorship has become an integral part of Lynn University's ongoing campus-wide Dively Frontiers in Globalization Luncheon Lecture Series' master theme. Sponsored by Lynn University's Board of Overseers, The Dively Frontiers in Globalization Luncheon Lecture Series has become synonymous with a forum featuring prominent speakers in tune with current issues. Among the guest lecturers have been Irving R. Levine, NBC News' Chief Economics Correspondent; Vice President Dan Qualye and Senator George Mitchell.

Roberta Peters

Soprano

February 23, 2000

A singer of incandescent vocal radiance, Roberta Peters has illuminated the opera and concert stages as one of America's great artists of this century. Her beautiful voice, exceptional showmanship and winning charm have captivated a worldwide public since her sensational debut at the Metropolitan Opera when, as a completely unknown and unheralded New Yorker, she made a surprise debut as Zerlina in Mozart's "Don Giovanni." She immediately became one of the Metropolitan's most prized sopranos, noted especially for her coloratura roles.

Miss Peters was born in New York City where as a young girl she exhibited an amazing natural voice that attracted the attention of the famed tenor, Jan Peerce. Upon his recommendation, she began voice lessons at the age of 13, choosing to make singing her career.

Roberta Peters holds the Metropolitan Opera record for the most performances of the following roles: the Queen of the Night in "The Magic Flute;" Gilda in "Rigoletto," Despina in "Cosi;" Zerlina in "Don Giovanni;" Norina in "Don Pasquale;" Oscar in "Ballo;" and, last but not least, Kitty in "The Last Savage."

Miss Peters was first invited to appear at the White House by President John F. Kennedy, and she has appeared to sing for every president at the Executive Mansion since then.

Although opera has been the center of her artistic life, Roberta Peters is also active in the fields of operetta and musical comedy. She has also devoted herself to social causes, such as the National Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Israel Bonds and AIDS research.

In 1991, Miss Peters was appointed by President Bush to the National Council on the Arts. She was honored by President Clinton in 1998 as a recipient of the prestigious National Medal of Arts.

THE DIVELY FRONTIERS IN GLOBALIZATION

Ann Curry
NBC's Today Show
News Anchor
March 29, 2000

One of the fastest rising stars on television, Ann Curry greets America every morning with the top news headlines of the day on NBC's Today Show. Named news anchor for the popular morning news program in March 1997, Ms. Curry is also a contributing correspondent on "Dateline NBC," and is a substitute anchor for the weekend edition of "NBC Nightly News."

Ann Curry's genuine sympathy for her subjects has helped her land high-profile interviews including the first interview with the McCaughey septuplets. She beat out many competitors for this rare interview, which made her a household name across America. Ms. Curry's recent reports from a refugee camp in Macedonia have brought the harsh realities of the Kosovo crisis close to home.

The daughter of a Japanese mother and white father, Ms. Curry has faced many obstacles in her effort to become the respected journalist she is today. She has fought off not only racial prejudice, but sexism as well. Ms. Curry was once told by the executive producer of her first job in television, "You're a woman. You can't carry a camera. If you were smart you wouldn't take this job. And besides, women have no news judgement." Ms. Curry took that job and years later has found herself one of the most recognized and respected journalists on television.

Ann Curry is the winner of two Emmy awards, a four-time recipient of the Golden Mike award, has received several Associated Press certificates of Excellence and an NAACP Award for Excellence in Reporting.
